Grand Master's Monthly Musings

“If you build it, he will come”

MW Bro. Dean Elliott, Grand Master, 2022-23

As we enter November, we recall the ultimate sacrifice that many Canadians made to serve their country. By participating in the act of remembrance on November 11, we pay tribute to those members of the Canadian Armed Forces and RCMP who served and those who continue to serve today. It is likely that many in-person ceremonies will take place this year. For those unable to attend in person, consider watching the national or a locally ceremony on television or on-line, wearing a poppy and observing two minutes of silence at 11:00 a.m. on November 11 – the 11th minute of the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month. Saskatchewan Masons may wear their regalia at Remembrance Day ceremonies without a dispensation.

This month s example of my theme “If you build it, he will come ” has to do with membership and mentorship:

If you sponsor a candidate and explain to him the nature of Freemasonry before he signs an application and mentor him throughout his entire Masonic journey, he will more likely find our institution to be worthy of our time.

If you engage the newly initiated candidate and make him feel important and at home, he will desire to attend Lodge meetings.

Far too much has been written about the Mason who is doted on during his initial interview and throughout his initiation, passing and raising and is then shuffled off to the side and left to fend for himself. These are often the brethren that we lose early in their Masonic journeys.

Sponsors should commit to helping their new brother practice his memory work so that all can be proud of their accomplishments and to set the bar high for what is expected of him in the future. Our oral tradition of ritual is one of the elements that separates Freemasonry from many other organizations.

The efforts the Lodge in general, and the sponsor in specific, put into keeping new brethren engaged will generally be richly rewarded with a new member who begins to better understand how what he learned in his three degrees serves as the foundation for his Masonic learning. The sponsor should consider taking the new brother to other lodges to see the degree work as an observer. No doubt he will be surprised to see all that took place that he could not remember shortly after each degree. He can also begin to take part in lodge ceremonies, perhaps with the flag charge or an apron charge, along with helping at refreshment to engage in conversation with other brethren month after month.

My upcoming travel is posted on the Grand Lodge website (www.saskmasons.ca). Further details are available on the website on the Calendar, which is only accessible once logged in. To obtain an account to access the member s area, please follow the directions on the bottom of the home page.

I look forward to receiving invitations to visit your Lodges and participate in your special events.
